Mandatory Reporting Guidelines

Federal government departments and agencies are required to focus on the achievement of results obtained through contributions and to report them in simple and understandable terms. Accordingly, the recipient of a contribution must measure and report on the impact that the initiative has had on the target community.

In order to assess the impact and to determine if expected results have been achieved, it is necessary to identify meaningful indicators and measures at the outset of the initiative. It is also useful to identify the data source and how the required information will be collected.

The following chart outlines some basic indicators and measures that must be included in the final report. Please include any additional relevant measures specific to the initiative. The method of collecting the required information is flexible and should be determined based on the method most appropriate for your community or the specific initiative. While some of the required information will be readily available, other data may necessitate the implementation of a simple data collection strategy such as a client feedback survey.

If you require further assistance with the preparation of this final report, please contact SGC officials (regional or Headquarters).
