HI ALL:

Just a pretty descriptive picture of a plastic slide that has been burnt. To replace this slide would be over $3000.00 (for a metal unit), and no installer will touch it. When this happens, we have to fabricate replacement attachment hardware ourselves to meet current CSA guidelines. This is why I (we) prefer metal slides, and if a plastic slide is considered, then the structure should have at least one metal unit. As a further note, Parks does not have a dedicated playstructure component replacement fund (replacements are 99% of the time required through vandalism or arson) and there is no insurance money that can be accessed for these replacements.

Cheers,
jason
