HISTORY/DISCUSSION

Markham Place residential development is part of the larger community of Waverly Heights, a subdivision which was approved by Council in the latter half of the 1980’s.

The subject City owned property, being part of the approved residential subdivision, was originally zoned RM-1. However, the City subsequently reserved it for a park & ride site in support of the proposed Southwest Transit Corridor project. This reservation was conditional to the relative requirements of the transit-way and, as such, the land could revert to its original intended use if it was not required.

The property was circulated to the relevant City Departments for their comments on the likelihood of it being offered for sale, through a public offering. There were no objections from these Departments.

Subject to Council’s declaration of the land as surplus, it is the intent of this Department to offer the subject property for sale on the open market.

The Ward Councilor was consulted and concurs with the intentions of the Department.
