Greetings,

I recently attended an informational session sponsored by OurWinnipeg, the 25 year plan intended to guide our city as it journeys forward.

It was impressive to be at the well attended meeting, and hear the knowledgeable people speak, both from the city and from the neighborhoods.

How can we think that creating more recreational space is not important? Do we all not work with the intent of creating a legacy for our children and future generations?

What kind of a city would we have if our forefathers had not signed on to the plan, that of guaranteeing a park(s) and community club in every neighborhood, and accessible to all?

Public transportation is being made less accessible, especially outside city limits. A trip to Grand Beach or Riding Mountain National Park is nearly impossible for some; how sad not to experience our country. Therefore it is imperative we provide easy access facilities in our neighborhoods.

I like to think that "our children are our messages to a time we will not see". We need to equip them so those messages will be our powerful and effective legacy.

Regards,

Margaret Wilcock

Pembina Active Living (55+) member and volunteer