Comments in writing: Transit improvements: Among all the changes, there is no mention of the 2 service-driven suggestions which I spoke to a while back. For most of the service day, most transit vehicles are nearly empty. Only in a few hours does the system struggle with too many riders. My suggestion had been to leave rush hour as is, but to offer an off-peak pass to make better use of vehicles already in service. Sadly, politicians morphed this logical idea into a reduced fare plan which (with strollers added to the mix) will make our rush hour service problem even worse. It seems that none of the programs being discussed here actually make the kind of improvement that the off-peak pass would have.
