Comments in writing: Hello members of the Executive Policy Committee,

Tartan Towing towed my vehicle while I was at a concert at the Burt one evening. The concert ended, and just after 11:00PM I realized my car was gone (where I had parked really looked like a parking spot by the way). I showed up at Tartan around noon the next day to get my vehicle and noticed a $36.00 "storage" charge. When I asked what that was, Tartan said it was a storage fee for my car being impounded for two days. I pointed out my vehicle has only been impounded for 15 hours (I went to bed, had a late breakfast, made my way there). But they refused to reduce it to a one day storage fee, and refused to give me my car without paying them for two days of storage.

I am mentioning this because I feel you need to understand the type of company Tartan Towing is to the public, and how they behave when they have the upper hand. I'm sure I'm not the only one in Winnipeg they have done this to. And it should be an important factor in your decision about whether you're willing to give Tartan Towing any of our public's money at all.

Thank you for listening,

Daniel

Ps: If you would like to see the invoice from that day, let me know; I still have it.
