Comments in writing: Since the city is now desperate to find homes for people, and since city hall still seems that they should be housed in the core area, this seems to be a good idea. CV points out in their documents that they are better at making deals than city hall, because they need not follow the rules. I believe that "agile" is the buzzword.
Since WATERFRONT DRIVE is used as an example, it is truly sad that the city has so completely abandoned property owners there. Is anyone on EPC aware that the WPS and other agencies are not working with property owners to mitigate the damage done to properties by encampment people? Until there are plans to mitigate this, it will be difficult to build and ethically sell residential property in that area.
