Comments in writing: After years of welcoming far more arrivals than we had homes for, Winnipeg needs more homes.
These homes cannot be serviced without increasing our infrastructure capacity. It is clear that this capacity will cost at least $150million. Since the city has promised to remove all bylaw impediments, to encourage builders, why is the money needed to support our infrastructure being thrown to the wind? Is there a document that lists the costs that the city will incur for this support? Have EPC and all elected members of Council been provided with such documentation? If this has not yet been done, perhaps you should ask why the money is being handed out to builders, who already stand to benefit from the best set of development bylaws in many decades.
