Comments in writing: You spent a lot of money for an Residential Food Waste pilot / test project. You had noble goals.
This was intended to provide data, and enable you to make valid decisions in 2024-25. It seems that any data that was gathered is not considered to be the private property of the company who carried out the pilot. This is very wrong. It also seems that the pilot or "experiment" was not adequately defined at the outset. This may have ruined any chance to provide good info for you now.
A lot of tax $ are involved. To reduce the chance that this money will be wasted, I suggest that you task an audit team to review the Pilot and the info collected. If the presumptions that led to your go-ahead decisions were incorrect, you must not go any further on this.
