Comments in writing: Water 2 Funding private composting. I have been composting household waste at home for nearly 70 years. Anyone who loves gardening and who seeks a greener world should do the same, at home. The primary benefit of this scheme is to signal great virtue in the folks who move this waste around, and those who hand our tax money to them. Those who compost at home have greater net virtue, but receive no accolades nor funding. Why not? Let's see some peer-reviewed data on the carbon footprint of the collection and the actual compost operation. Until data is available, and until city hall spending rules are followed, I ask you to not spend our money on this.
