Water 4. This is a political decision, but devoid of any data. We are pretty sure that you would not authorize spending $200k on cars based only on a dozen nice words.
1. Using electricity to heat and cool a large public building can never be net-zero for energy. Advanced tech can reduce the amount of electricity consumed, but never to zero. There are absolute laws of entropy and enthalpy. To ignore them is to mislead the public.
2. If this project will install a higher efficiency chiller and a few other improvements, then why is there no data here on how previous installations are working? Does the lack of data say that this will never work?
3. It is highly imprudent to spend money entirely based on some buzzwords. We know that you generally take your fiduciary responsibilities seriously. Please do not abandon them by approving this, until all the data is laid out in front of you and us.
