City hall has rules and procedures They are cumbersome but they bring order to city governance.
When a member of Council decides to violate those rules, they should get an automatic letter from the Ethics judge. There is a growing trend in gov to ignore rules. This is just the latest example.
If EPC decides to vote in favor of rule breaking, it will hurt the public image of city hall as a place that both makes and follows rules.
I feel I should remind you that in the good old days places were only named for dead people, in celebration of what they had done. Once we cross that line we face PR problems if the person then does bad things.
