We urge the city council to move a motion to amend the Wellington Bike Lane Item to restore the pilot to what the engineers at the public works staff recommended on March 4th.

Some city politicians are making a new promise by breaking an old one. “Temporary bike lanes are coming to Wellington Crescent”. That’s what the city said publicly. Janice Lukes has chosen to put delay after delay in the way of this project. Her words and her actions do not match. Now she is trying to get us to forget about her promise of installing any bike infrastructure in the Spring of 2026 by promising an unrealistic timeline for permanent infrastructure instead. Why should we believe her this time?

Currently, the city does not have a design for permanent bike infrastructure on Wellington Crescent. And for over a year, Lukes has chosen to sit and do nothing with the design she’s been given for the pilot bike lane. This is not the behaviour of an “active transportation advocate”, as she so often claims to be.

Ever since 2024, when Rob Jenner was hit and killed by a driver on Wellington Crescent, the community has been pushing for safety improvements to Wellington Crescent. Seniors living on Wellington Crescent spoke at city hall, saying that they hope to still be alive and able to ride a bike by the time there is a bike lane on Wellington Crescent. Meanwhile, Mayor Gillham openly states that he is not concerned with their infrastructure needs.
