It is good to see that some Audit team advice is being implemented.
Under bylaws, there seems to be no evidence that redundant and pointless bylaws are on their way out. A functional Audit of the city's bylaws would show those used to fine the public, but which no longer actually provide any benefit to the public. The Sunday family dinner bylaw is a classic. If you have a long driveway and a big extended family, a Sunday dinner or birthday party can cost you. A third car in your driveway, and someone gets mailed a big ticket.
