5.5 million could pay for the temporary lane on Wellington this summer, and then 10 more temporary projects in our bike network's dangerous gap.

The pilot bike lane could reveal ways that the permanent lane could be less expensive.

On the one hand, if you do the pilot this year, you could save a bunch of money. On the other hand, you could save lives and limbs.

In closing, a joke: What type of city council doesn't reach for Vision Zero?

One with Zero Vision 🤣🤣🤣🤣🤣
